waited upon him on the subject of Eastern in tervention was surely the most unctuous and exquisitely spiced diplomatic dish that was ever cooked, and, as I shall attempt to explain, there is a very comical side to it. The deputation was headed by Mr. Bright, was supported by forty members of Parliament, and was numecously and very influentially composed, but i must be understood that its real drift was to support the Christians against the Torks. Of cruelty practised by the Turke against nonthe rule of the Russian, refused to remain in it, I same cause should operate in India and China available for suppressing the insurrection were Basiff-Bazouks and volunteers, who to their desire to serve Turkey added a resolution to have revenue for the evil done by the insurgents. That they did horrible things, nobody can doubt Knowing what they are, and what provocation they received, it would have been wonderful i they had not done more than enough to shock any civilised people. Sir Henry Elliot, however, is able to state that not only have the atrocities committed been greatly exaggerated, and in many cases invented, but that the Turkish Government did all it could to put a stop to the cruelties of its irregular forces. This authoritative statement entirely knocked be bumenitarians off their perch, and threw the entire onus of the atrocities on those who emloyed the Servian agents to get up the revolt Then Lord Derby declared that he entirely agreed with the deputation on the subject of non-intervention. As between the Sultan and is revolted subjects, interference could not be thought of, and had never been even mooted by the Government. He would mediate when the House. proper time came, and use the utmost influence t his command to check the atrodities complained of. He thought the time for mediation near at hand—(evidently meaning that Servia and Montenegro were getting worsted and must soon collapse). Here again he so completely agreed with the deputation that he left them nothing to say, and then he proceeded to explain why the British Fleet has been concentrated at > de oam p ROYAL MOVEMENTS. There must be some quarrel between the English and Russian Courts. The Duchess of Edinburgh remains at St. Petersburg. The King of Greece is the Princess of Wales's brother. He married Princess Olga, daughter of the Grand Dake Constanting, the Ozar's brother. The King and Queen of Greece lately visited Paris, where Constantine happened to be. Olga stopped with her father, whilst ber usband came over here and was duly presented to the Queen. Alter a few days, Queen Olgs followed, but she has not been presented. She

THE "VANGUED." Although the Admiralty have nelected the plan of Dr. Rutherford, of Newcastle-upon-Type, for raising the Vanguard out of 130 other schemes submitted, there is every probability of their seeking to dispose of the abip as she lies by private sale. Mr. Rutherford, besides being a doctor of medicine, is also a Dissenting minister, and has acted as manager to the Quashura Co. operative Engine Works. He made a tonder to the Admiralty for raising the wreck, which their morandum, which was drawn up by the three | Lordships declined to entertain; and should Emperors with the assistance of their three far- they fail to sell the wreck they will probably blow the ship up. and endeavour to resone as much of the salvage as possible.
